Joe Heinemann's long and successful career in jazz and blues has now led him to an entirely new sound on his solo piano debut, Gratitude. Recorded at Imaginary Road Studios with co-producers Will Ackerman and Tom Eaton (who also engineered, mixed and mastered the album), Gratitude represents not just a change in Heinemann's musical direction but also marks his emergence as a force to be reckoned with in this genre of music, referred to as "the rebirth of the Windham sound" by noted music reviewer Bill Binkelman. Heinemann's piano melodies, sometimes accompanied by other acoustic instruments, are reflective, intimate, unquestionably personal and heartfelt, and were recorded with superb attention to detail.

What Critics Are Saying:

MICHAEL DIAMOND, MUSIC AND MEDIA FOCUS

"The Latin root of the word 'gratitude' means 'pleasing.' The new album by pianist and composer Joe Heinemann...Gratitude certainly lives up to the origin of its title as the word 'pleasing' provides a perfect description of the graceful and elegant melodies found within its [eleven] tracks."

BILL BINKELMAN, ZONE MUSIC REPORTER

"The 'quiet' beauty of Gratitude's cover photo perfectly captures the mood of this outstanding release by pianist Joe Heinemann. The music takes you gently by the hand and walks you through a comforting soundscape of gentle piano melodies with occasional superb backing accompaniment. Heinemann has had this music inside of him for a long time, I'd wager, and now that it has been recorded and released, it is a rare gift from a musician of uncommon talent and grace to an audience that doubtless will fall head over heels for one of the best recordings of its type in several years."
